acpo ltd. Launches New Self-Wound Overlaminates Designed For Digital Printers

Oak Harbor, OH, January 20, 2010 – Specializing in manufacturing polyester and polypropylene PSA roll label films, acpo ltd. adds to their extensive product line by launching self-wound overlaminates specifically designed for digital printing operations. As digital presses penetrate the label and flexible packaging markets, acpo ltd. meets a growing demand for PSA roll label films designed to work specifically with this digital print technology.

Engineered with a proprietary adhesive formula, these self-wound overlaminates allow high compatibility with digital printing equipment and perform extremely well, offering durability, scratch protection and attractiveness to the label. The product line consists of four face stock choices in various mil thicknesses to meet customer application requirements. The clear polyester PSA roll label films give the extra benefit of offering UV screening and are available in standard or premium UV protection. The polypropylene self-wound overlaminates are offered in clear or matte finishes. Three film choices are available by roll and master, while the premium polyester UV screening product is offered in master only. For digital printer testing, acpo ltd. offers sample roll material upon request. As innovative PSA coaters, acpo ltd. will consider customers choosing specialty face stocks to match with their adhesive technology for customized digital print applications.

Located in Oak Harbor, Ohio, acpo ltd. is an ISO 9001:2008 certified company which practices Lean Manufacturing principles devoted to creating new and improved self-wound overlaminates for the label printing and flexible packaging industries.
